

LONDON, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1860.

The Times, referred to Buckingham Palace on Saturday afternoon from No. 7.

The Irish Party.-A会见 took place on Thursday at 10 Downing Street between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Bright. The meeting was for the purpose of discussing the future policy of the Government. The Irish leaders are understood to have expressed a desire that the Government should proceed with the repeal of the Union Act. Mr. Bright is reported to have indicated his willingness to support such a measure, provided it is accompanied by a system of land purchase for the benefit of the Irish peasantry. The meeting was said to have been cordial and amicable.

The Irish Crisis.-The Irish crisis continues to dominate the political scene. The Government is under pressure to take decisive action to address the unrest in Ireland. The Irish leaders have reiterated their demand for Home Rule and the repeal of the Union Act. The Foreign Office is said to be considering the implications of the Irish situation on its relations with other European powers. The economic impact of the unrest in Ireland is also a concern, as the British economy is heavily dependent on trade with Ireland.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION.

We print this morning the first of a series of articles dealing with the British public schools. We have selected for our first article the Merchant Taylors' School, which is one of the oldest and most exclusive of the independent schools in London. The school has a long history of educational excellence and is well known for its rigorous academic standards and disciplined environment. We believe that this school is an excellent example of the type of public school that is facing a number of challenges in today's educational landscape.

MEMORIAL TO THE EVENTS OF 1857 IN JAPAN.

To the Editors of The Times,

We, the undersigned citizens of England, wish to draw your attention to the Memorial to the Events of 1857 in Japan. This event marked the beginning of Japan's modernization and its emergence as a major power in Asia. We believe that it is important to remember this event and its impact on the world.

Yours sincerely,

TO THE EDITORS OF THE TIMES.

In the past few weeks, we have been hearing much about the events of 1857 in Japan. This event is often referred to as the "Meiji Restoration." It was a time of great change and transformation for Japan, and it has had a lasting impact on the country's development. We believe that it is important to understand the significance of this event and to remember the sacrifices made by those who fought for Japan's independence.

Yours faithfully,
